55' | FR | 2024 | CANAL +

An odyssey into the world's iciest waters, documenting the grueling physical and mental stages of freediving prodigy Arthur Guérien-Boëri. This cinematic journey captures a man pushing the absolute boundaries of human endurance against the elements. It dives deep into his preparation, revealing the vulnerability and sheer determination of a champion.

What goes through an athlete's mind when he faces extreme conditions? How do you prepare your body for deadly temperatures? How do you train your mind to overcome that pernicious unknown - the cold- that makes you lose all your bearings? And what do you do when it's your head that can't keep up? And what drives man to push back his limits, even at the risk of his life?

For two years, and on several continents, this film followed Nice-based athlete Arthur Guérien-Boeri, freediving prodigy and the most successful Frenchman in his discipline, as he prepared physically and mentally to set two new records in dynamic freediving. From Nice to Canada, via Finland and Paris, a breathtaking odyssey !

In the hell of scam centers

Directed by Constantin Simon & Ali Watanu
Produced by Premières Lignes & Zebra Prod

52' | FR | 2026 | LCP

This film is an in-depth, gripping investigation into the multi-billion-dollar scam centers thriving in Southeast Asia, where hundreds of thousands of men and women are violently held captive by criminal syndicates.

These captives come from Asia, Africa, and Europe, lured through social media by promises of lucrative careers in tech. Educated and multilingual, they are targeted specifically for their computer literacy. However, the moment they arrive, the dream turns into a nightmare: violent Chinese syndicates immediately seize their passports and cut them off from the world.

Imprisoned inside heavily guarded compounds, they are forced to work exhausting shifts seven days a week under the constant threat of physical abuse and torture. Their mandatory mission is to operate thousands of fake profiles, deploying sophisticated psychological and romantic manipulation to ensnare global «clients.» Once a deep emotional bond is formed, they manipulate their victims into fraudulent investment and cryptocurrency schemes, systematically draining their bank accounts.

Circles of silence

The Le Scouarnec case

Directed by Cyril Denvers & Christophe Offenstein
Produced by Les films du Huitième Jour & LSD Films

2x52' | FR | 2026 | France Télévisions

How could a convicted sexual predator operate with impunity for three decades, while continuing his surgical practice? How could an entire family protect him by keeping silent? The documentary Le Cercle du Silence (Circles of Silence) attempts to answer these burning questions, digging far beyond the headlines.

Through this terrifying case, the film exposes a devastating systemic scourge: sexual violence against minors, a crisis too often met with collective ignorance. In France, the statistics are staggering—a child is the victim of incest, rape, or sexual assault every three minutes. Yet, a mere 7% of predators are ever convicted, as the vast majority remain shielded by a fortress of silence, secrecy, and denial.

For three decades, Joël Le Scouarnec, a highly respected visceral surgeon and prominent public figure, operated within this vacuum of accountability. He abused hundreds of minors, calculatingly exploiting his medical authority and the extreme vulnerability of his young patients during post-operative visits or as they woke from anesthesia. Meticulously recorded with chilling precision in his personal diaries, his crimes eventually led to a historic four-month trial in Vannes, France, bringing together 299 civil parties in a desperate quest for justice. The documentary dissects the profound institutional failures, societal blindness, and deep-seated family complicity that allowed a monster to operate with impunity for decades.

The crusade of the vice-president

Directed by Thomas Snégaroff
Produced by Together Media

52' | 70' | FR | 2025 | France Télévisions

A political thriller rooted in reality, this documentary traces the rise of J.D. Vance, from troubled Rust Belt roots to the Vice Presidency, revealing the man behind the conservative revolution shaking American democracy. It dissects his radical transformation from a fierce «Never-Trump» critic into the ultimate vanguard of the MAGA movement. Through exclusive insights, the film explores how this strategic pivot reshaped both his destiny and the future of the nation.

From the rusted factories of the Rust Belt to the Oval Office, the journey of J.D. Vance, the current Vice President of the United States, fascinates as much as it unsettles. Born from a sacrificed America, he embodies the revenge of the forgotten, but also a radical ideology. His meteoric rise reveals a national-populism that defies the world order and threatens democracy. He humiliates, he shocks; Trump's heir promises a conservative revolution. Through unprecedented access and incisive analysis, we unravel the complex tapestry of his personal story and its profound implications for the future of American democracy. Written like a psychological thriller, this documentary explores the story of the man who wants to overturn America.

Criminal addictions

Directed by Paul Moreira
Produced by Premières lignes

52' | 2x52' | FR | 2026 | France Télévisions

After countless documentaries about victims, this is the next step: the opioid epidemic, told by the very perpetrators. A story that blurs the lines between global pharma and crime networks. Marketing directors of some labs who spent time in jail are now ready to share their memories and tell how ruthless their methods were : exotic dancers, corruption, booze...

This is the inside story of a toxic business that has killed 800,000 Americans and has been slowly spreading worldwide. The opioid epidemic was originally triggered by the corporate greed of the US pharma industry. What started in boardroom meetings as a highly aggressive marketing campaign for prescription painkillers soon mutated into an uncontrollable public health crisis. Seizing a massive new market of addicts, Mexican cartels then picked up the Fentanyl production, flooding the streets with a substance fifty times more potent than heroin.

This film will give voice to corporate executives and criminals. They are talking either because they entered a redemption process or because they were summoned by congressmen or attorneys in front of cameras. We got our hands on hours of precious video footage from hearings and interrogatories. We can finally have a fascinating look into the inner dealings of the biggest crime of the century.

Red Notices

Produced by Les Beaux Docs & 13 Prods

52' | FR | 2025 | LCP

Interpol is an institution with 195 member countries whose mission is to promote collaboration between police authorities to create a safer world! Some member countries such as China, Russia, Iran have been using Interpol's network to hunt down human rights activists and political opponents...

Their names are Idris, Chao, Ali, Haroo, José... These men and women are English, American, French, Chinese, Turkish, Bahraini, Emirati, Egyptian, Russian, Iranian... Several hundred of them have been rotting in prison for months, tortured, living in fear and forced to keep silent. Some are political dissidents, human rights activists, members of religious or ethnic minorities... Others are businessmen and women who have simply had the misfortune to overshadow an influential competitor or to have refused to pay bribes. All are victims of the dysfunction of the world's second largest organization after the UN: Interpol. Autocrats and corrupt regimes have weaponized the agency's «Red Notices» to track down their enemies far beyond their own borders. By turning a blind eye to these abuses, the international police organization has inadvertently become an instrument of transnational oppression. This film exposes how a system designed to catch world-class criminals is now being used to crush innocent lives.

Defense Europe's awakening

Directed by Éric Ouzounian & Charlotte Ingignoli Lavocat
Produced by Seventine

52' | FR | 2026 | LCP

A sudden geopolitical fracture has shattered European security, bringing a brutal end to seven decades of guaranteed peace. This hard-hitting documentary dives into the immediate aftermath of this crisis, focusing on France's shift toward an unprecedented defense effort. It provides an immersive look into the battlefields of cyberspace and frontline forces across land, air, and sea.

February 28, 2025: A tense confrontation between Donald Trump and Volodymyr Zelensky shatters Europe's security architecture. Forty-eight hours later, European leaders gather in London for an emergency summit. The verdict is brutal: the post-Cold War order is dead. For 70 years, peace was a given. Today, the ancient adage rules: If you want peace, prepare for war. Focusing on France, Europe's leading military and nuclear power, this hard-hitting documentary asks the ultimate question: Is the West truly ready for a high-intensity conflict? Through exclusive access to military drills, defense industries, and cutting-edge tech, the film reveals how a nation shifts from a mere «war economy» to a total «war effort.» From the battlefields of cyberspace to the frontline forces on land, air, and sea, this is a chilling, inside look at a continent waking up to a tangible reality: war is no longer history.

War on campus

Directed by Sabrina Van Tassel
Produced by TV Presse

52' | FR | 2024 | M6

In the United States, university campuses have become the scene of an ideological war between students that is fracturing American society. Faced with the militant intolerance of American academics, America is watching in awe as Generation Z seeks to erase the world of its elders, and whose vote will weigh heavily in the choice of the next President of the United States.

Israeli-Palestinian conflict, abortion, LGBT rights: between wokism and conservatism, two camps are clashing among students. How do you explain such a split in the universities? Wokist ideology, obsessed with the injustices suffered by ethnic minorities, makes shortcuts between First Amendment freedom of expression, the Middle East conflict, and Black Lives Matter. It casts the Jew as the white oppressor on a par with early settlers or American slaveholders, a rhetoric that is rampant on TikTok, relayed by influencers, and now found on the outskirts of campuses. This digital echo chamber has effectively shut down nuanced debate, replacing dialogue with a culture of cancellation and intimidation. As lines are drawn in the sand, university administrations find themselves paralyzed, caught between protecting free speech and managing ideological warfare. The campus has transformed from a sanctuary of learning into a polarized ideological battleground.

A woman is shown in profile, holding a camera to her eye as if filming. In the foreground, a computer monitor displays a video feed of a person's face, partially obscured by a dark, textured overlay. The background is dark and moody, with some shelves visible in the upper left.

Cam gaze

Directed by Camille Ducellier & Claire Richard
Produced by Upian

52' | FR | 2025 | Arte

Through the story of Jennifer Ringley, this film delves into the early Web of the 1990s to explore what drives girls to film themselves, and the world to watch them. Is it superficial or revolutionary? A feminist approach or the new clothes of self-objectification? Liberating or alienating? By revisiting the birth of JenniCam, the documentary uncovers the blueprint of our modern digital existence. It reveals how a lone pioneer inadvertently predicted the attention economy, influencer culture, and the blur between public and private life that defines today's social media.

In the 1990s, an American student decided on a whim to film her daily life and put it online, thus becoming the first camgirl in history. At the height of her popularity, JenniCam's site attracted up to 100 million visitors a week, she was interviewed on national TV and crystallized the fears and debates sparked by the arrival of the Web in our daily lives : some saw in it the advent of a narcissistic culture obsessed with spectacle, others the emergence of a new way of talking about oneself and creating links with strangers. In 2003, JenniCam closed her site for good. Since then, she has deserted the Internet. Yet since her retirement, her descendants have conquered the world: girls who film their lives and interact with strangers rule the Web and social media, from vloggers and youtubers to tiktokers of all ages.

A woman with long dark hair, wearing an orange and white striped prison uniform, stands in a line. She has several blue star tattoos on her left arm. The background is slightly blurred, showing other people in similar uniforms.

The weaker sex America wages war against its women

Directed by Brice Lambert
Produced by Studiofact

52' | FR | 2025 | Arte

A documentary investigation into the decline of women's rights in the land of the free. The film exposes how a resurgence of religious extremism and sexist laws are turning America into the world's leading jailer of women. It shatters the myth of American liberty by revealing the systemic erosion of bodily autonomy.

This documentary reveals the shocking reality of women's rights in the United States. Despite its image as a beacon of freedom, the US imprisons more women than any other country, driven by sexist laws and a resurgence of religious extremism. From forced marriage to the criminalization of pregnancy, we witness the erosion of women's rights in the heartland, exploring the stories of those impacted and the fight for resistance. The film exposes a frightening legal machinery where miscarriages are treated as crime scenes and vulnerable minors are legally bound to abusers under the guise of parental consent. This institutional violence disproportionately targets low-income women and minorities, trapping them in a cycle of poverty and incarceration. By connecting the dots between political battlegrounds and everyday lives, the investigation uncovers a systematic dismantling of bodily autonomy. It is an urgent wake-up call regarding a democracy in crisis, where basic human rights are being rewritten by the judiciary.

Known or unknown, then or now, athletes or amateurs, this film follows the intimate journey of 6 inspiring women who use sports to conquer their freedom, while retracing the great history of women's fight to access sports for over 150 years.

150 years ago, there was no such thing as a woman running. Back then, it was impossible for her to imagine "abandoning" her husband and children at dawn on a Sunday morning, to take time out for herself, to remember that she had a body, that it belonged to her and that she could do with it as she pleased. Today, these women can be seen in our cities, our countryside and our sports fields. But who are they? What obstacles have they had to overcome to achieve their freedom? What risks did they take to gain the right to govern their own bodies? Aren't they contributing to the evolution of male/ female relations in our societies? Is sport really a shared, open, mixed space, where men and women can access and appear on an equal footing?

Mothers in struggle

Directed by Johanna Bedeau

Produced by 416 Prod

52' | FR | 2024 | France Télévisions

In cases of domestic violence, children's voices remain fragile before a justice system that too often sees them as manipulated by their mothers. This film follows three women who, after denouncing sexual abuse by their (ex-) partners, find themselves convicted for child nonrepresentation.

This is the story of the mothers who denounce the sexual violence committed by their (ex-)spouses against their children, and while trying to protect them, find themselves convicted of child nonrepresentation. Even as they dare to break the silence, they are faced with an impossible choice: leave their child in the hands of their abuser, or take the law into their own hands, sometimes risking their lives, to ensure their safety. There are those who remain silent about the violence suffered by their children, fearing that the state will take them away. Those who have to cope with legal proceedings and endure institutional abuse. These women each struggle in their own way, driven by the hope that the recent liberation of speech will change the way society looks at them.

A man and a woman are shown in a dark, intimate setting. The man, on the left, has a beard and is looking down with a somber expression. The woman, on the right, is seen in profile, looking towards the man. The lighting is low, creating a somber and dramatic atmosphere.

Until the appeal

Directed by Anne Hirsch & Arnaud Mansir
Produced by Ego Productions

52' | FR | 2022 | France Télévisions

Until the appeal, the double punishment of a father follows the struggle of a family to prove the innocence of a man accused of causing the death of his baby. Faced with rigid medical dogmas and a system that refuses to back down, this ordinary family turns into a team of investigators to challenge the state's accusations. Their journey becomes a race against time to prevent a tragic medical misunderstanding from destroying what is left of their lives. A deeply moving film that reveals the cold violence of relentless justice.

Alexandre is in court for the second time. He is accused of shaking his baby 9 years ago, causing its death. In the initial trial, Alexandre was unanimously found not guilty. But the public prosecutor's office appealed, and Alexandre is now awaiting his second trial. Since the tragedy, his whole life, and his family's, has revolved around legal deadlines. Between fear and determination, he has become the investigator of his own story, fighting for the truth and proving his innocence. For nearly a decade, the sword of Damocles has hung over his head, tearing his family apart and freezing their lives in a state of perpetual limbo. As he steps back into the courtroom, he is not just fighting for his freedom, but to finally be allowed to grieve the son he lost.

The Pont-Neuf's caverne

Directed by Vincent Lorca
Produced by Together Media

52' | FR | 2026 | France Télévisions

When contemporary art reclaims history, Paris becomes the stage for an extraordinary creative passing of the baton. This film documents a monumental human and technical challenge, where the genius of the artist meets the collective strength of those who turn a dream into a tangible reality.

Forty-one years after Christo and Jeanne-Claude wrapped the Pont-Neuf (1985), the artist JR returned to the same location at the invitation of their Foundation. This time, the bridge did not disappear under a sheet. It became the point of origin for an apparition: a grotto that one could simply admire or explore for a sensory and immersive experience. The film is not a portrait of an artist. It follows the collective challenge of creating this monumental work through a social and human investigation conducted with the people involved. This ambitious undertaking brings together engineers, local residents, and dreamers to breathe new life into one of Paris's most iconic landmarks. By documenting the invisible hands behind the masterpiece, the film captures a unique moment where ephemeral art and historical heritage collide to transform the city's landscape.

Produced by Seventine

52' | FR | 2026 | Museum TV

«On October 19, 2025, a daylight heist at the Louvre Museum shocked the world.» In a brazen seven-minute operation, a commando unit breached the historic Apollo Gallery, escaping with royal crown jewels valued at €88 million. This high-stakes documentary thriller unravels how the world's most secure museum could be so easily compromised. It is a global investigation into the fragile boundaries separating priceless human history from international crime.

The investigation soon exposed a staggering web of security vulnerabilities, revealing that even global institutions are dangerously unprotected. By tracking the dark networks of the global art market, now the third-largest illicit trade after drugs and weapons, the film explores if these treasures were melted down or bought by a shadow collector. Drawing parallels to the infamous 2010 Paris Museum of Modern Art theft, the documentary reveals how cultural heritage has become a disposable currency. Through an immersive blend of CCTV footage and exclusive interviews with international investigators, the narrative transcends the heist itself. Ultimately, it poses a haunting question to the global market: how do we protect our collective memory when the past can vanish in seven minutes?

"The Great Wave off Kanagawa" is Hokusai's most famous print. But its creator, like the rest of his prolific body of work, has remained in the shadow of this now iconic image. Yet the unique work of this "old fool of drawing," as he called himself, deserves our attention.

Landscape prints, including the iconic Thirty-Six Views of Mount Fuji series to which The Great Wave off Kanagawa belongs, sit alongside other sublime representations of life, forming a dazzling collection that captures the fleeting beauty of the floating world. This vast body of work revolutionized the perception of nature, blending traditional Japanese techniques with a pioneering use of perspective.

Discovered by Europe, and in particular by French artistic circles shortly after his death in 1849, Hokusai fascinated Western masters with his bold, fluid lines and the vibrant, unprecedented colors of his woodblock prints, notably his signature Prussian blue. He became a primary catalyst for the Japonisme movement, serving as a profound source of inspiration for Impressionists and Post-Impressionists alike, such as Monet, Degas, Cézanne, Van Gogh, and Bonnard, who found in his work a new way of seeing and framing reality. This artistic shockwave forever altered the course of modern art, cementing his legacy and gaining him enduring worldwide fame.

For the very first time, international singer Yael Naim reveals herself in a documentary co-written with director Jill Coulon. Filmed over a period of five years, Yael Naim, A New Soul tells the intimate, sensitive and poetic story of the liberation of a multifaceted female artist.

"Yael Naim – A New Soul" takes the opposite tack to the standard biopic. It gradually paints a portrait of a free woman in mid-life who questions her choices and the promises she made in her youth: 'Have you become the person you promised yourself you would be?' Through this intimate and universal journey, the film transcends the framework of the musical documentary. It questions the balance between creation and motherhood, the desire for the absolute and everyday anchoring, artistic identity and social pressures, whether they come from patriarchy or matriarchy. With modesty, poetry and intensity, the film captures an inner voice that tries to remain true to itself, to assert its independence and to spread its wings, whatever the cost, whatever the price to pay.

The Russian military archives in Moscow are a secret place strictly closed to the public, operating as a classified fortress of state secrets. Even leading international historians are only granted access in exceptional circumstances, following months of bureaucratic vetting. These vaults contain major historical documents relating to World War II—ranging from high-level Soviet intelligence reports to the personal belongings of the Nazi elite. Most notably, they house the priceless spoils of war seized by the Red Army during the chaotic storming of Adolf Hitler's bunker in Berlin in early May 1945. Preserved in near-perfect condition, these private diaries, strategic blueprints, and internal memos offer an unvarnished look into the psychological collapse and the structural machinery of the Nazi regime during its final days. By gaining unprecedented access to these restricted rooms, this 52-minute historical investigative documentary declassifies and reveals archives of major historical value to the general public for the very first time. Through expert analysis and breathtaking close-ups, the film brings the past into the present, starting with one of the bunker's most mysterious artifacts: Hitler's personal "golden book."

At its heart, this is the deeply intimate portrait of a family frozen in time, caught between the suffocating weight of grief and the sudden, violent hope for answers. It forces us to ask how much a human soul can endure before the truth finally comes to light.

In 2004, 10-year-old Jonathan disappeared from his school summer camp in the middle of the night. No witnesses, no signs of struggle, just an empty bed and a pair of slippers. For twenty-two years, his parents, Virginie and Stéphane, have lived in a state of suspended animation, their lives frozen by the unspeakable. Now, in 2026, the trial of the «Man in Black», a notorious German serial predator, is finally opening in Nantes. But this isn't just a crime story; it's a high-tension psychological thriller about the weight of silence and the agonizing endurance of grief. With unprecedented access to the family's intimacy, this film explores the fragile crossroads where a broken family's search for peace meets the cold machinery of international justice.

A woman with dark hair tied back, wearing a light blue hospital gown, is leaning over a baby in a medical bed. The baby is lying on its back, wearing a green oxygen mask and has various medical sensors attached to its chest and head. The woman is looking down at the baby with a focused expression. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

Tiny hearts, big fights

Directed by Eric Guéret
Produced by Haut & Court

70' | FR | 2026 | France Télévisions

This immersive documentary takes us inside the neonatal unit of Robert Debré Hospital, one of France's largest. Éric Guéret shed light on the unfiltered realities of neonatal care. Neonatal units care for extremely premature babies as well as full-term infants with severe medical conditions.

Over a six-month period, filmmaker Eric Guéret immerses himself in their world, telling the stories of these children, their families, and the passionate teams dedicated to their care. Guéret's unflinching look at this sensitive subject helps us understand the realities of neonatal care without taboo. Inside this high-tension ward, every breath is a victory and every decision carries immense weight for these fragile human beings. The camera captures both the miracle of modern medicine and the profound exhaustion of a medical staff pushed to their absolute limits. Through these intimate portraits, the film lays bare a system where human devotion can no longer fully compensate for the severe lack of resources and beds. Ultimately, it forces us to confront what we lose as a society when our most vital safety nets begin to unravel. A tribute to public hospitals and a warning about the dramatic consequences of their decline.

Such a resounding silence

Directed by Emmanuelle Béart & Anastasia Mikova
Produced by Haut et Court Doc

110' | FR | 2024 | M6, RTBF, TV5 Québec

In this documentary, Emmanuelle Béart sets out to shatter the silence surrounding incest. Alongside director Anastasia Mikova, she confronts her personal history with this taboo subject, opening up a dialogue with others who have been affected.

In 2023, actress Emmanuelle Béart revealed publicly that she is a survivor of incest, contributing to a growing national reckoning on child sexual abuse in France. Alongside co-director Anastasia Mikova, Béart creates a powerful documentary that gives a voice to survivors, confronting the societal taboos and legal shortcomings in a country where a child is sexually abused every three minutes. Initially reluctant to include her own story, Béart ultimately shares the devastating impact of the silence imposed by abusers, describing it as a noise that takes many forms within the victim. Through personal and collective testimonies, this stirring film explores the enduring trauma of incest and offers a universal message of resilience and solidarity.

The faces of wrath

Directed by Shoresh Afkari & Virginie Plaut
Produced by TV Presse

52' | FR | 2024 | LCP

This film is a behind-the-scenes look at the Women, Life, Freedom uprising in Iran. The story begins a few weeks after the death of Mahsa Amini, a young Kurdish student who died on September 16, 2022 under police attack for a few strands of hair escaping from her veil.

Shorresh Afkari, an Iranian filmmaker, contacted a French colleague, Virginie Plaut. He wanted to « fight in his own way, doing what he knows how to do... film and show the history that is being written before his eyes ». Told in the first person in the footsteps of the Iranian director, this documentary is a choral tale that reveals a gallery of colorful characters, representative of this Iranian population at the end of its strength and patience : a small couple of teenagers who dream of living their love in the open and in complete freedom, a cab driver, a fierce opponent, and his mother who tries at all costs to protect him, a painter who tries as best she can to practice her art in spite of the day of censorship, a doctor who treats demonstrators clandestinely, a young man ready to do anything to find money...

The Ukrainian flame

Directed by Benjamin Montel

Produced by Mañana Films

52' | FR | 2024 | France Télévisoins

What's left of the Olympic dream when the whole nation is at war? This film takes us to the heart of Ukrainian sport and the intimacy of its athletes. From Kiev to Zaporijia, via Dnipro and Irpin, the characters in this film live to the rhythm of sirens, Russian missiles, power cuts... and training sessions. The goal : Paris 2024.

Volodymyr, Marya, Alina and Iryna are young Ukrainian champions in gymnastics, fencing, athletics, wrestling and kayaking. Uprooted by two years of war, their lives were shattered by horror, and their Olympic destinies got hit by human folly. Volodymyr lost a leg at the Front and is now trying to qualify for the Paris Paralympics. Marya's father is at the Front and hasn't been home for months, and Alina is terrorized by the bombs that hit her town every day. As for Irina, the horrors she suffered in Irpin at the start of the war have plunged her into a depression from which she is struggling to escape. While training in the freezing Ukrainian winter, qualification attempts and sporting feats punctuate our story, this film is above all a breakthrough into Ukrainian society and the intimacy of athletes in wartime.

Grafting life

Directed by Charlotte Lavocat
Produced by TV Presse

52' | FR | 2024 | Teva

As teenagers, Anaïs, Déborah, and Océane discovered they would never carry life due to MRKH syndrome. Born without a uterus, they faced profound grief but held onto a daring hope: a uterus transplant. This documentary delves into their journey, exploring questions of motherhood, science, and miracles.

In the recovery room, the two sisters meet again after an exceptional operation : Aurélie has just given her uterus to her little sister Anaïs. Born without this essential organ for carrying a child, the 36-year-old woman now allows herself to dream of having a baby. A crazy wish but possible. Three and a half years ago, Déborah benefited from the first French uterus transplant thanks to a donation from her mother. She is now expecting her second child. These women are surrounded by an extraordinary medical team : surgeons, anesthetists, nurses, midwives and researchers. The team has been working on this project for over ten years. After the success of the first two transplants, they are already preparing the next one. Crossed portraits of these three women united by the irrepressible desire to give life.

Motherhood

Directed by Cécile Khindria et Armelle de Rocquiny
Produced by Les Beaux Docs et ASLC

52' | FR | 2024 | France Télévisoins

This is the story of a woman's transformation. A woman who becomes a mother and, upon becoming pregnant, is unaware of the upheavals this birth will bring. While motherhood is universal, the cliché of peaceful first months persists. We follow her from pregnancy through her baby's early months. Unvarnished, without taboos.

Giving birth is always depicted in its best light. The dream of a lifetime, of a woman, of a couple. The culmination. Simple happiness. So much for the official version. And then there's the other. All that's left unsaid so as not to ruin such a pretty picture: the abyss of pain, anxiety, helplessness, tears and dizziness that the arrival of a little being weighing around 3 kilos and demanding attention 24 hours a day can provoke. In this film, we follow a young woman as she becomes a mother for the first time. We'll start filming the last months of her pregnancy, right up to her baby's first months. She'll be living on the edge of this post-partum period, hung over the void and still taboo in society, even if the word is gradually getting out.

Gaypride in the fields

Directed by Antoine Rabin

Produced by Les Beaux Docs & 13 Prods

52' | FR | 2024 | France Télévisions

In July 2023 the 2nd edition of a rural pride festival in the village of Chenevelles takes place. The region's LGBTQ+ community, along with the mayor and his constituents, are mobilizing to ensure that this celebration resonates throughout the country. They hope to spread the word that the countryside has freed itself from stereotypes.

The idea was born at a cocktail party between Mayor Cyril Cibert, a married homosexual father of two, and Etienne Deshoulières, a lawyer with the Stop Homophobie association. They had a crazy idea: their own rural Pride, in Chenevelles please! They laughed a lot, and the idea finally caught on! The Fiertés Rurales association was born. The event exceeded 700 participants. Farmers lent their tractors, locals created floats, children made banners. Enough to question the acceptance of LGBTQIA+ people in the countryside where, not so long ago, they had to hide. Times are changing. While LGBTQIA+ acts are on the rise, it is mainly in cities, leaving rural areas less affected. "The city, which used to be seen as an obligatory passage for a personal coming-out, is no longer a protective space".

« The planet is burning. We're drowning in trash. The future looks bleak...» Or does it? What if we told you there's hope? Meet Arthur Auboeuf, a young entrepreneur with a radical vision: an ecological revolution that creates jobs, boosts the economy, and builds a better world for everyone. Through his eyes, green transition isn't about restriction and compromise; it's an exciting, massive business and social opportunity. This inspiring journey proves that our generation already holds the tools to rewrite the future—if we are bold enough to use them.

In «Tomorrow at last,» Arthur Auboeuf travels the globe to meet the innovators who are turning this vision into reality. From ingenious apps that fight food waste to revolutionary technologies that transform trash into treasure, these pioneers are proving that sustainability can combine a healthy planet and wealthy businesses. With passion and urgency, they share their stories and inspire us all to join the movement for a brighter future. «Tomorrow at last» is a documentary that will change the way you think about ecology, economy, and the power of human ingenuity.

Wild resistance

Directed by Alexandre Chacón

Produced by Les Beaux Docs productions

52' | FR | 2026 | France Télévisions

For centuries, humans have mistreated nature and all living things, even though they are part of it. In the Vercors, a new generation of activists is reclaiming the wilderness through the radical lens of rewilding. By stepping away from traditional, heavy-handed conservation, these pioneers are buying up vast plots of land to simply let ecosystem dynamics heal themselves. They closely monitor the return of ancient predators, the regrowth of native flora, and the spontaneous restoration of biodiversity. Through their relentless efforts, this French plateau is slowly transforming into a living laboratory for a planet in desperate need of balance.

By creating strictly protected sanctuaries, they are putting into practice a philosophy of free evolution, where human intervention ceases and nature regains its full sovereignty. In these pockets of resilience, flora and fauna thrive without constraint: rivers return to their natural courses, endangered species make a comeback, and the cycle of life and death is left intact to restore functional ecosystems. This bold approach demonstrates that "doing nothing" is a powerful act of activism; by stepping back, these activists allow the land to naturally combat climate change and purify resources, proving that true protection lies in letting nature return to the wild.

Coca-Cola The inside story

Directed by Faustine Zanetta-Monti
Produced by Seventine

52' | FR | 2026 | Novo 19

How did an American soda manage to capture the heart and soul of a completely different culture? This story goes far beyond a simple product launch or a standard corporate expansion. It is a vibrant exploration of corporate ambition meeting deep-rooted local traditions, charting the unexpected journey of a global brand that became an intimate part of every day life.

By tracing the company's arrival and its rocky early challenges, the film highlights the pivotal historical and cultural milestones that ultimately defined its presence on the ground. Through rare archives and compelling accounts, we uncover the powerful, personal human stories behind the brand's success—from the local workers who built its heritage to the families who adopted it at their dinner tables. This documentary reveals how Coca-Cola became more than just a soft drink; through a unique process of cultural adaptation, it transformed into an icon with a little extra soul that resonates deeply with the local population. It's a sparkling love story of global vision blending seamlessly with local identity, a cinematic journey that uncovers how a foreign flavor became a symbol of shared moments and community pride.

Nomads

Directed by Alexandre Pierrin
Produced by Talweg

52' | 3x30' | FR | 2025 | France Télévisions

Are the new nomads resourceful utopians or the good students of hyper-mobile neo-liberalism? The answer probably lies somewhere between the two. By changing their world because they've given up on changing the world, these new nomads are radical pragmatists who show us one of the faces of our future, which is likely to be unstable and therefore, mobile.

The term "nomad" has often been associated with prehistoric man and his way of life. Yet it's impossible to ignore that it's becoming widely popular with a whole new generation in search of adventure and freedom. More and more people are deciding to live the life of a nomadic traveller. Whether in a van or an airplane, they all share the same goal : to escape a daily routine that no longer satisfies them, and to finally give meaning to their lives. But can we really speak of a long term lifestyle, or is it simply a generational phenomenon? Let's meet these young French people who have embarked on a fabulous adventure against all odds, and discover their daily lives.
